

Ian McAllister Andrew Nikiforuk

a story with two ends

Two Canadian authors discuss tar sands, pipelines and the uncertain future of BC's wild coast

An award-winning photographer and author, Ian McAllister works for the non-profit organization Pacific Wild and is one of Canada's leading wilderness advocates. His first two books, The Great Bear Rainforest, Canada's Forgotten Coast and The Last Wild Wolves both won the Booksellers' Choice Award for BC Book of the Year. McAllister is also a nature photographer and filmmaker and along with his wife, received Time Magazine's "Leader for the 21 Century" award. Ian lives with his family on the BC central coast.

Andrew Nikiforuk's work as a journalist – for such magazines as Saturday Night, Maclean's, Canadian Business, Report on Business Magazine, Georgia Straight, and Equinox – has earned him four National Magazine Awards, the Atkinson Fellowship in Public Policy, and top honors from the Association of Canadian Journalists. His latest book, Tar Sands: Dirty Oil and the Future of a Continent reveals the true costs of America's oil addiction.
